

Introduction:

Hook:

I'm about to teach you to skyrocket your Etsy shop to five figures per month in the next ninety days using "The Precision Play."

This is without gambling on the niche, having an endless product line, or getting hidden away.

I want you to imagine something for a second.

You're sitting at home on a regular weekday instead of being at the office.

You open your laptop to check your Etsy dashboard real quick.

You see that your store is sitting at yet another five-figure month.

This is literally the life that "The Precision Play" has created for me.

Everything that you're going to learn throughout the next few minutes of this free recorded training could genuinely change the trajectory of your own life.

I've tried my very best to keep this as simple and concise as possible so that you're no longer in the dark by the end of it.

Super Hook:

Let me just give you some context real quick about my backstory, my lifestyle, and everything in between, in case you're new here.

It all started with wanting some time, location, and financial freedom.

I was grinding away at a Shopify store with shocking margins.

This turned into running Etsy shops which hit five figures per month hands free.

I've gone on to make over $360,000 with them while living my best life.

I'm now helping others do the same and building a software for it.

There are plenty of nine-to-five workers trying to replace their full-time job.

Lead:

It will all make a lot more sense once you've heard this story about two people trying to catch fish.

The first one is taking it easy.

They drop the line wherever the water looks nice, so they figure out that it's empty after standing there for hours.

They tip in bait by the bucketload, so they empty all of their resources for nothing.

They cast where everybody else is standing, so they've come too late to the party.

You might think that they've got better odds with a wider net, and the possibility is higher, but the probability isn't necessarily.

Coming home empty-handed is inevitable when the entire catch is being left up to chance.

The second one reads the water.

They determine beforehand where the fish have been shoaling, so they can tell the full and empty areas apart.

They give the right amount of bait to the fish that are going to bite on it, so their line gets chosen instead of all of the others.

They beat everybody else to the quiet area, so they land the most impressive catch of the day.

You might think that the productive spots get scooped up instantly, but the crowd are all piling onto the same jetty.

Every single cast that you make should be where the fish have already been proven to bite.

Replacing your full-time job as a nine-to-five worker is very similar in that sense.

Most people take it easy even though they could flip the script by reading the water.

It's important to come to terms with the fact that you're allowed to stop winging it and decide to double down on pattern recognition.

Body:

Problem:

Let me explain what I'm referring to in that story by taking it easy.

It's "The Spray And Pray Trap."

There are three reasons why this approach is such a problem.

The first is that you go with the niche that feels right.

This means that you only find out it doesn't work once you're already in too deep.

The second is that you prioritise quantity over quality.

This means that you spread yourself too thin.

The third is that you pull all of the wrong levers.

This means that you get buried in a corner of the platform.

You might think that following your passion is the right move, but that's only correct when it adheres to the law of supply and demand.

Staying at the bottom is inevitable when climbing to the top is being left up to chance.

Solution:

Let me explain what I'm referring to in that story by reading the water.

It's "The Precision Play."

There are three reasons why this approach is the solution.

The first is that you pick the niche that makes the most sense.

This means that you separate the good from the bad before committing to anything.

The second is that you provide real value to the market.

This means that you stand out amongst the crowd.

The third is that you focus on the needle-moving tasks.

This means that you get the recognition that you deserve.

You might think that it's too saturated for reading between the lines, but that's only an issue for the sellers who are reliant on luck.

Every single move that you make should be in agreement with what's already proven to succeed.

Training:

You're probably wondering how this actually works though.

It can be boiled down to three pillars.

The first is selecting winning niches.

It all starts with knowing what's worth it from the get go.

You want to choose the niches that have existing demand, then supply them with your own personal taste.

It's important to understand that seeking out the ones with many buyers and few sellers, is the gap where goldmines are hiding in plain sight.

A great strategy is validating it with prior market research, so that every single option stems from a calculation.

One of my students named Hunter put this into practice right away, and ended up making $500 more than expected.

The second is creating incredible products.

This is the bread and butter of the business model.

You want to ditch the tendency of pumping out volume, because one strong listing will beat a dozen weak ones.

It's important to understand that coming across as premium as possible, is what gives your listings a higher perceived value.

A great strategy is having your listings belong to a category of one, which is the very thing that will improve your ranking and clicks.

One of my students named Emma felt the power of this very early on, and has more than doubled her previously successful Etsy shop.

The third is outperforming all of your competitors.

These are the moves that give you a monopoly over page one.

You want your listings to be the ones taking all of the market share, seeing as the alternative is them being the ones that take none of the market share.

It's important to understand that making your overall presentation count, is how you go about using the search feature to your advantage.

A great strategy is keeping in mind that this warm traffic is free of charge, so all of your winners will compound over a long period of time.

One of my students named Sharda proved how far this can be taken, and hit $20,000 per month in the span of just four months.

You've got everything that you need to replace your full-time job as a nine-to-five worker with this approach once you've got those three pillars working together.

Outroduction:

Offer:

There are three paths that you can take from here.

The first is doing nothing, where you carry on winging it and stay exactly where you are.

The second is doing this on your own, where you embark on a difficult and long-winded journey.

The third is doing it together, where you skip straight past all of the guesswork.

I was stuck in the first two for the longest time, so I've built out the third one so that you don't have to do the same

I'm talking about "Etsy Accelerator."

This is where I work with you to undergo a crystal clear transformation.

Skyrocket your Etsy shop to five figures per month in the next 90 days using "The Precision Play."

This is without gambling on the niche, having an endless product line, or getting hidden away.

I'll run you through its main deliverables right here.

You hold my hand the entire way with one-on-one access.

You become part of a community of others replacing their full-time jobs as nine-to-five workers.

I want you to be aware of the fact that there is going to be an investment associated with it.

All I'm going to say is that I've seen others charging way more for way less, so you're getting back a multitude of what you're putting in.

It sits somewhere in the mid four figures, just to give you some peace of mind.

There are also a bunch of bonuses that you should know about.

'The Niche Vault,' which is a curated list of ones with countless five-figure per month Etsy shops.

'The Product Protocol,' which are step-by-step instructions for creating them.

'The Performance Catapult,' which comes down to marketing and sales strategy, as far as performance goes.

The Handover Handbook, which is all about outsourcing and delegation in order to work on the business, instead of inside of it.

The Systemization Blueprint, which helps you the whole thing on autopilot, so that you can take a step back from everything.

I've tried my very best to take some of the weight off of your shoulders.

I'll work with you free of charge if you haven't got your shop doing five figures a month in the timeframe of ninety days.

This means that you're covered until it doesn't even matter anymore.

The only real way to lose here is by never taking a strike at winning.

I do need to be real with you about something though.

I'm only accepting students in cohorts of fifteen that stay open for the span of just one week.

This means that you should take immediate action if I've piqued your interest whatsoever.

Call-to-action:

The next steps are quite short and sweet.

All you have to do is click the button right below this free recorded training on the landing page in order to submit an application form.

It will help me determine whether or not you're a good fit for "Etsy Accelerator," so that nobody's time, energy, or attention is wasted.

It will allow you to schedule a discovery call with me for a time that suits you if you do turn out to be a good fit for this.

We will just use that to map all of this onto your situation and come up with a game plan.

Close:

Anyways, that pretty much sums everything up.

You know that "The Spray And Pray Trap," or taking it easy, makes staying at the bottom inevitable when getting to the top is being left up to chance.

You know that "The Precision Play," or reading the water, makes sure that every single move is in agreement with what's already proven to succeed.

You've seen others replacing their full-time jobs as nine-to-five workers with this exact approach.

Nobody is going to take that first step other than yourself.

With that being said, I really do appreciate you watching all the way until the end of this free recorded training, and I hope you have a great rest of your day.

Cheers.
